X-RAY INSTALLED BY DR. McCREARY

An event of great importance to Belleville and the entire Bay of Quinte district centres in the recent installation of one of the latest, largest and most complete X-Ray equipment by Dr. S. R. McCreary, B. Sc., at his offices, 170 Front street, Belleville, where he has established an X-Ray clinic in connection with the practice of his profession.

The X-Ray equipment occupies a large room especially fitted up for the purpose with the necessary electrical apparatus and all modern appliances. An evidence of the size and completeness of the apparatus lies in the fact that the investment represents over six thousand dollars.

Patients recline on an adjustable table which an ingenious arrangement of levers can be moved up or down or sideways with ease and quickness. The writer was priviledged to witness some experiments showing the completeness and efficiency of the apparatus. The heart and lungs and all interior organs of the human anatomy are plainly visible under the powerful rays which penetrate clothing and all obstructions and show the human organs functioning in a normal condition or otherwise. A photographic attachment permits pictures to be taken of the organs as revealed by the X-Rays for close study and diagnosis. Fractures of bones are clearly outlined thereby invaluable assistance given to the physician in properly setting them, and the X-Ray pictures taken before and after treatment prove the efficacy of the treatment.

This is the largest and most complete X-Ray equipment between Toronto and Montreal, with the exception of one in the military hospital at Kingston, which is of similar size. Since being installed last week the equipment has been used in a number of cases and results have been most satisfactory.—Belleville Ontario.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

On Tuesday evening of last week, a combined meeting of the Board of Education and Town Council met in the Council Chamber to hear addresses. Dandeno and Sarsolen, of the Department of Education. The above named gentlemen are Napanee's inspectors to advise the School Board in reference to the advisability of starting a Vocational School in connection with the Collegiate Institute. The gentlemen explained the steps necessary to start such a school and the assistance which the Board of Trade promising from the government if such a school should be established. While explaining the regulations the gentlemen did not appear to have much confidence in the success of the schools they wish to establish and the School Board are not much closer to evolving a workable scheme than they were before.

The Collegiate Institute is almost sure to be over-crowded in September and something will have to be done to relieve the situation. Should a separate wing be built for the commercial department alone, or some other course will be taught instead of a two years course at at present, in order to receive a grant from the government on the salaries paid the teachings in this department.

Messrs. Dandeno and Sarsolen will present a written report to the Board regarding their investigations here.

A BRILLIANT NOVELIST.

Mrs. Edith Wharton Also a High-minded Woman.

No writer living in the United States has been more a good writer for so many years as Mrs. Edith Wharton. In fact, it is hard to conceive that makes [illegible] Wharton at all, for other American writers. The general habit of the writers in the United States is to become careful pieces of work, and to be rewarded for their passion to emphasize their popular [illegible] and using that they write pot-boilers for the emboser of their lives.

Mrs. Wharton began to write in 1899, and after the appearance of "The Valley of Decision," in 1902, sterling features always looked forward to by Chautauqua fans. The management believes that this number will be the fifty-five will be presented. It is Mark Swan's delightful three-act Comedy, "Her Own Money." First produced at the Victor Theatre, New York City, in September, 1913, it made a memorable hit with the critics and public, and here produced for the first time at Chautauqua. In addition to being an uproariously funny comedy, the New York scribe has obvious plays like "It Pays to Advertise," "Nothing But the Truth," and "Seven Keys to Baldpate" in its excellent message that will be welcomed by the head of every family in the community. It portrays those trivial and infinitesimal ills in the daily lives of two married couples, who are doomed continually to worries about money, in such a way as to force on the auditor's attention the fact that much of the cause of domestic unhappiness is due to lack of a clear understanding regarding money matters when two people first embark upon matrimonial seas.

CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAM SPARKLES WITH GOOD THINGS

Opera Singers, Orators from overseas, Orchestras, Broadway Play Company are a Feature

Almost before you realize it, the big brown top will rise and for six joyous, inspiring days it will be a real community centre, where young and old will gather daily to enjoy the intellectual and musical feasts provided by your committee.

A glance at the splendid programme as announced would indicate that the Dominion Chautauqua management has outdone itself in providing a most attractive programme of genuine merit. It is the Fifth Anniversary for Chautauqua in Ontario, and a special effort has been made to celebrate the event by presenting the best programme so far provided.

SIR FREDERICK BRITISH STATESMAN TO ADDRESS CHAUTAUQUA

From England comes the honourable Sir Purdy Caldwell Wilson, former member of the British parliament, now the American correspondent to the London Daily news, and well-known as an author and after-dinner speaker of charm. This is the most important feature announcement that the management has been priviledged to make during the five years that Chautauqua has come to Ontario. Mr. Wilson has addressed many important audiences in Canada, as well as in Great Britain and the United States, including the Canadian Clubs of Toronto, Montreal, New York, and other cities. This is what the chairman of the Rotary Club of New York City says after hearing the address diplomat, and then, in a masterful, manlike manner told the unforgetable truth about the nations of the earth. His logic was unsound, his charity was strong, his sincerity unquestioned. All through the week-end Mr. Napanee was the spirit of a better world understanding, founded on spiritual upbuilding." Mr. Wilson will speak to Ontario audiences on "Some Problems in the British Empire"; following his address, he will be pleased to answer queries from the audiences.

GIFTED NEW YORK OPERA SINGER COMING

It is safe to say that Chautauqua audiences have not heretofore enjoyed the privelege of hearing an artist of real operatic concert and opera singer as Miss Hazel Huntington, of New York City, who will appear on the evening of Chautauqua in a delightful programme, supported by the Herbert Macfarren Instrumental Quartette of London England.

Miss Huntington has sung with the Society of American Singers and other opera productions, spending over four seasons at the Park Theatre, New York City; last season she was the prima donna soprano in the William Wade Hinshaw Production of Mozart's Opera Comique, "The Impresario" and

Noted Australian Orator, Author, World-Traveller

In 1919 Skeyhill lectured at Chautauqua in Ontario and was given an ovation wherever he appeared. It will be remembered he spoke on "The Trojan Way," a lecture dealing with the famous Gallipoli campaign, in which Skeyhill participated until blinded by a wound. In his lecture tours, Skeyhill has demonstrated that he is one of the most interesting orators now speaking before Chautauqua audiences.

Since his appearance in Ontario, Skeyhill has been very active. At a time when it seemed impossible for any person, who would not unreservedly put himself under the control of the Soviet Government, to enter Russia, when the great newspapers of Canada and the United States where trying by every means to get reporters into and out of Russia in order to get the facts, Skeyhill entered Soviet Russia in December, 1920, remained several months, and succeeded in getting out safely, not without some very narrow escapes. He visited Petrograd, Moscow, Kiev, and several other centres. He saw much of the conditions that exist there; he learned from all classes of people in Russia how they regard their present government; he gathered such facts that he is able to throw much light upon matters that have seemed obscure to most of us because, largely, of the many contradictory reports published about Soviet Russia.

Skeyhill has no special interest to serve; he is interested in finding out as much of the truth as possible and telling it clearly as he can. Wherever he has spoken since his return from Russia—whether in Australia, Canada, or the United States—he has been the object of much abuse and criticism from advocates of what is loosely called Bolshevism. In the town hall, Sydney, Australia, Skeyhill was booed by local followers of Bolshevist doctrines for nearly two hours and was compelled to spend four hours in delivering an address that usually can be given in less than two hours. But he stuck and told the audience, most of which was friendly, what he himself had seen in Russia.

PROF. JOHN DUXBURY

Critics call him "England's Greatest Reciter and Reader."

Direct from London, England, comes Prof. John Duxbury to entertain Ontario audiences this summer. This important engagement was arranged through the London office of the Dominion Chautauqua, Limited, recently established.

Prof. John Duxbury's career is a striking instance of concentration, the devotion of one's whole time and energy to a particular field of labor. He brings to the work he does the combined results of culture, great poetic appreciation, and real earnestness, and it is this, together with a strong endeavor to reach ahigh standard of excellence, that has raised him to the unique position he now occupies in the elocutionary world.

Prof. Duxbury has given thousands of recitals at most of the best known Churches, Literary Societies, Y.M.C.A.'s in the British Isles, Canada, United States, France and Belgium. He established the Manchester School of Elocution, and in 1908 was appointed Director of Studies in Elocution at the Victoria University of Manchester.

DR. GEORGE W. DERBY

President, Mount Royal College, Calgary, Author and Lecturer

Dr. Kerby represents Canada on our Chautauqua programme and will speak on "The Task of a Nation." As a preacher and educational leader, he is well-known in eastern Canada as well as in the west. Before going to Calgary he held important pastorates in Woodstock, Hamilton, St. Catherines, Brantford, and Montreal. For the last fourteen years he has lived in Calgary, he was pastor of the Central Church for eight years. This church, built under his ministry, is one of the largest institutional churches in the Dominion. During the past eleven years he has been president of Mount Royal College, Calgary, an institution he was largely instrumental in founding.

Born in Lambton County, Ontario, in 1860, he was educated at the Sarnia High School, Cobourg Collegiate Institute and Victoria College. He is an honor graduate in Arts of Victoria College, affiliated with Toronto University, from which University he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity at the Convocation of 1911. Chief recruiting officer in Military District No. 13, and chief recruiting representative under the military service act during the war, he holds the rank of Honorary Major and Chaplain.

PARLIAMENTARY LETTER

The Budget Debate wound up, if not in a flood of words. The three leaders had spoken in the first two days of the week, but there were still some of their followers who figured there was something to be said on behalf of their constituents. Though every argument that could be made for or against the budget had already been made long since, the backbenchers had to have their say, and they said it.

The speeches of the three leaders were interesting. Mr. Crerar liked neither the budget nor the Drayton amendment to it, and in order to find a middle course, he moved a sub-amendment which declared against continuance of the principle of protection. Subsequently this was ruled out of order by the Speaker who had spent some hours combing the precedents to cover the case, and who ruled, with many of his predecessors, that there could be only one amendment to a motion to go into either committee or supply, or committee of ways and means.

Mr. Crerar was peeved at the outcome, naturally, and appealed to the House. Only his followers voted for him. The appeal and it went down, defeat by a majority of 57.

The Progressive Party at the moment presents an interesting complexity of opinion. There are many of its members who would like to vote for the budget; none who will vote for the Drayton amendment, and not a few who are between the devil and the deep sea since their own attempted amendment was disallowed. In private conversation many of them admit that they haven't anything better in mind than Mr. Fielding has laid before them; they have their objections to the budget, but they admit they could not do better. If there were a few changes, which, by the way, they might be able to make while in committee on the resolutions, they could accept it, and they would like to. On the other hand, a group, chiefly composed of the Alberta twelve apostles, will vote against the budget on the ground that it is not what they expected and not what they wanted.

Writing in advance of the vote being taken, one would be very strongly tempted to say that the Progressive Party will divide.

Some have openly declared that they cannot see through Mr. Crerar's free trade glasses and that they think this budget is a step in the right direction. None of them but must admit that the country needs revenue, and while there is talk of a tax on vacant lands to replace other taxes, none of the responsible members of the party have urged it upon the government very strongly.

Mr. Crerar was not in particular good form for his speech. Something was lacking when he [illegible] ahead in value that he [illegible] Government ship and thigh and that he was quite averse to acceptance of the Drayton amendment. He attacked the budget however, on the grounds that it was a continuance of protection. Mr. King, when his turn came, denied absolutely that such was the case. He pointed to the difficulties facing every section of the country and every class of Canadians. Could the government wisely have gone further than it did? he asks the House. Every step which has been made has been away from protection. The Finance Minister had lowered the duties on implements of production in the basic industries, and had done his best to make the burden of taxation fall less heavily upon the poor, and more heavily upon the richer classes. The charge that this was a Protectionist Budget was entirely unfounded.

The Prime Minister's contribution was short but meaty. Instead of wasting hours of the time of the House in flights of oratory, Rt. Hon. Mr. King confined his remarks to the matter in hand, except for pointing out to the Progressives, who were loudly proclaiming breeches of faith, that they were in the position of people who lived in glass houses, therefore could not afford to throw stones.

The leader of the Opposition was typically Meighenesque in his delivery and his material. In the main his speech which continued for over two hours, was a condemnation of the Government for as he alleged, have broken faith with the people, and also of condemnation for the Progressives, he declared, were going home empty-handed; they had not got anything they wanted.

All that they could tell their constituents when they got back home, was that they had been compelled to forego the Crow's Nest Pass Agreement; had permitted the setting up of a Canadian Wheat Board; had failed to bring about either a reduction in the cost of living, or a substantial reduction in the duties on the things which they were pledged to have placed on the free list. Mr. Meighen's speech was full of politics and vitriol. At its close, one of his warm supporters ventured the opinion that it was a wonderful political speech, but unfortunately misjudged as to both time and place in its delivery. As for its effect on the House or the country he thought it would be nil.

* * *

The Budget Debate out of the way the House will turn its attention to putting through the resolutions and getting everything in shape for the grand finale. There are many matters to be dealt with, such as the Wheat Board, Re-establishment, and the Railway Rates. It is hoped to have most of them out of the way and the decks cleared for action by about another two weeks. The end should be in sight by June 20th at least; for with the arrival of the hot weather the members are anxious to shake the dust of Ottawa from their shoes and get back amongst the cows and chickens or whatever form of outdoor life they favor during the summer months.

Interest in the budget has changed to impending modifications in taxation proposals. Indications that changes are at hand was given by the Prime Minister.

"The Minister of Finance," he observed, when the House was discussing when the vote should be taken, "will doubtless wish to make a statement to the House in full of the discussion here and of representations made to him, and may possibly suggest some modifications in the proposals now before the House."

Of the nature of the "modifications" Mr. King gave no inkling, although changes in the proposed stamp tax on checks are generally thought to be included.

Mr. Lomer Gouin's speech is regarded as of particular importance to its possible bearing on the coming crucial division on the main budget motion.

"With the Liberal Party," he averred, "the main concern respecting tariff is not free trade or protection. It is revenue. We agreed that agriculture was the basic industry, but emphasized the need of manufacturers.

"Abolish the tariff," he queried, "No government could think of it, and it could not do it if it tried."

There has been talk of two million people having left Canada.

"I may be wrong," commented Sir Lomer Gouin, "but if in my opinion if we had in this country more manufacturers we should have kept with us many of those who left to go elsewhere."

The Mirrors of Doom.

If an earthquake takes place at the other side of the world, it writes its own record on the delicate instruments kept in the observatories in this country.

Next morning you will see in the papers that our instruments have recorded an earthquake of great violence which took place in South America. It may be days before news comes through by telegraph from the scene of the upheaval to confirm the instrument's message.

The seismograph, as the earthquake recorder is called, consists of a revolving drum and a tiny mirror. The latter is balanced so delicately that the slightest tremor of the earth's crust will set it dancing. The drum, which is turned by clockwork, is covered with a roll of sensitized photographic paper. The mirror focuses a little point of light, reflected from a brilliant lamp, on to the paper.

So long as nothing is happening the mirror remains at rest, and as the drum revolves a perfectly straight line is traced on the paper by the point of light. But as soon as a shock occurs the mirror is agitated and the line becomes a zigzag.

A stone thrown into a pool sets up ripples which move outwards in ever-widening circles until they reach the edge. An earthquake produces the same result, except that the ripples are formed in the earth's hard but slightly elastic crust.

Fortunately, serious earthquakes are rare, but hundreds of small shocks take place every day, and seismographs of the most delicate type record them all.

Men of Metal.

Many curious substances are found in the human body, and it has been discovered that, among other things, it contains a large quantity of metals of various kinds.

Some years ago a famous chemist announced that he had found iodine in the thyroid gland, and that led scientists to believe that other equally unexpected elements may find their way into the human organs through some exceptional circumstances.

They discovered that there was iron, and in some cases copper, in the blood, and that copper and other heavy metals occurred in considerable quantities in the liver. Some scientists have reported that they have found even arsenic in small quantities.

Bromine is found in the nerves and muscles of some animals, as well as men, but there is never more than one part in a hundred thousand. Although bromine and iodine are very similar in their chemical behaviour they are not found in the same parts of the body.

VALUE OF MILK IN THE DIET

SOME POINTED AND PERTINENT QUERIES FOR DAIRYMEN.

The chief duty of the milk specialist, Miss Helen G. Campbell, of the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture is to disseminate information on the value of a food of milk and dairy products generally. That she is fulfilling her task her recently published phamplet entitled "Why and How to Use Milk" is abundant proof. Miss Campbell deals further with the subject in the May-June Agricultural Gazette under the heading "The Dietary Value of Milk." In this article, backed up by the universally acknowledged authority of Dr. E. V. McCollum, of John Hopkins University, it is shown how milk adds to the nutritive value of cereals in body building, and consequently how important its generous consumption is to children particularly and to adults generally. Milk in any form contributes to the making of bone and muscle and to the preservation of health. It contains the elements that our systems most require, such as mineral matter, lime and phosphate, and to a lesser extent, iron, and a pleasant and necessary quantity of fat. It is helpful against scurvy and promotive of a clear, healthy skin. It is the main sustenance of the infant as well as of the invalid in many cases.

In dealing with the subject the writer puts some pointed questions, which it would be well if every milk producer could answer in the affirmative. She asks for instance, if as much care as possible is exercised to keep the milk from contamination, if covered milk pails are used, if cows are cleaned and curried as they should be, and their udders washed before milking, if clean hands, clean clothes, and clean places are insisted upon, if pains are taken to cool the milk as rapidly as possible and to keep it cold, and how many dairymen are really vitally interested in selling the best milk, rather than just milk ?

Signs of Old Age.

As most people realize, wrinkles are caused by worry and age, the former leading to involuntary contractions of various portions of the face — particularly those situated near the eyes and mouth—and the latter causing the tissues which support the outer layers of skin to sag and give, thus giving rise to furrows and wrinkles. Wrinkles are really unavoidable, though freedom from worry and the scientific application of massage treatments and reliable skin foods will prevent them from appearing at a comparatively early age.

As time goes on, however, the skin becomes shrivelled and puckered, especially in persons who are thin, for here there is no underlying foundation of fatty tissue to support the skin, which becomes too loose for the body and falls into folds. In persons who are old—ninety or more—the skin often gets so thin that many wrinkles disappear.

The service is later to be extended to all parts of the Empire, making it possible to go from Liverpool to Sydney via Halifax and across Canada by rail in 20 days; it now takes 30 days.

How Basil King Became a Writer

During one week last November, the public of a number of Canada's large cities was treated to an entirely new interest in her writers. "Canadian Authors' Week" was the magic few days when people who had read and loved books could at last meet in person their authors, discuss anything they chose with them in bookshop, lecture hall or drawing room, and carry away autographed trophies for the treasure bookshelf. Perhaps the most outstanding figure among the big Canadian masters of the pen was the presence from across the border of that world-famous writer of fiction and inspirational works, Mr. Basil King.

Basil King was born "on an island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence," as the American papers have it, or, as we know it, Charlottetown, P.E.I. Basil King is a cosmopolitan, however, as most writers are wont to be, and he is planning to spend a winter in Canada if conditions permit. His permanent place of residence is an historic place in the United States—for he occupies the famous old one-time home of William Dean Howells, the "dean of American letters," at Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The circumstances by which Mr. King became an author are related by him as follows:

"I am sometimes asked how I 'broke into print.' I never broke in; I fell in. Early in the nineteen hundreds, at a time when I thought all yearning for authorship dead, an idea came to me, while on a train, which I thought might make a good short story. Falling before the temptation, I began writing the story that night, finishing it two or three days later. On sending it to the 'Atlantic,' I was amazed to find it accepted and paid for at once, and published within a few months. A writing career was further precipitated by the fact of partially losing my sight. On the day when I realized my eyes were going I bought a typewriter. If the worst came to the worst I knew I could manage to work it as a blind man plays a piano. The worst didn't come to the worst, though it came to pretty bad. During years of living as a semi-invalid, the House of Imagination proved a refuge from all troubles."

From the first his inspirational trend of mind has colored his work, and hand in hand with his great pieces of fiction have come those truly triumphant books and articles of his on the life of the spirit, its ways to accomplishment, strength and conquest. "The Street Called Straight," "The City of Comrades," "The Abolishing of Death," "The Thread of Flame," and his last great novel, "The Empty Sack," are those of his works which have brought him the greatest fame. That the trend of his writing, differing as it does from the usual path of successful fiction, had a remarkable popular appeal is demonstrated by the phenomenal success which his stories have received when dramatized for the motion pictures. His best work has been used for the screen, and his name upon any scenario practically ensures its enthusiastic reception by exhibitors as well as the public. As someone said, "As long as people are as interested in the writers of films as the actors, there is no danger of the movies becoming undesirable." The showing of Basil King's pictures in Canada last year proved that there was no danger of cinematic deterioration here, at any rate. The popularity of "Earthbound" will not soon be forgotten. But Basil King himself says, as someone told him when he first undertook writing as a serious thing, that like Jacob, he must serve seven years for his master, and seven years for Rachel, or success, and only now is he enjoying the fruits of his labor in the company of his bride—recognition.

During a gathering of friends in the bookworld a young woman, who had recently recovered from a serious illness, spoke words that indicate the inborn ire of the author.

"Mr. King, I personally owe you a great debt," she said drawing her chair toward him. "You have saved my life twice. Once when I had lost my father, a few years ago—and just a month ago, when I faced death myself. The first time, I read your articles on 'The Abolishing of Death' when they were running in magazine form, and they practically gave me the courage to go on when I had thought to go under completely. The second time, during my illness, I was given a copy of your last novel, 'The Empty Sack,' and the quotation you made a theme of in the book, carried me through my worst hours not only of suffering but actual fear, and, I think, saved me from that worst enemy of an ill person, self pity. The quotation I mean is the one remembered from the Bible by Bob when in his hospital ward, "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.'"

Basil King's interest in people for themselves, as well as his work as a humanitarian and student of life in every aspect, often taken him to the great prison in the United States, Sing Sing. Among the two great friends who have been murderers, and, as he naively puts it, "a murderer is just like any other man." The two men whom he particularly visits are exceptionally well-bred and educated persons, but Mr. King admits that to speak, as he is often called upon to do, in the general assembly there, is terrific. The constant association with each other, he is convinced, is the most thorough punishment the criminals confined in prison suffer.

The sight of a conqueror is always an inspiring thing — but the sentiment of the people of Toronto towards this outstanding Canadian of Canadians, who has so quietly and so nobly fought his good fight against failing health and blindness, must be great.

THE UNICORN.

Ancient Beliefs Concerning Its Fabulous Horn.

"The unicorn," wrote Pliny, "has the head of a stag, the feet of an elephant, the tail of a boar, and the rest of the body is like that of the horse. It makes a deep bowling noise and has a single black horn two cubits in length which projects from the middle of its forehead."

From that detailed description one might suppose that the writer had actually seen the animal. As a matter of fact, however, the description has no firmer foundation than the tusk of the narwhal, which suggested the horny the imagination of the writer has supplied all the rest of the characteristics.

The unicorn is described by Mr. Frederic A. Lucas in "Natural History" as a fabulous beast. He who follows the trail of the unicorn through the pages of early literature will, he says, often find it confused with the rhinoceros, although the more intelligent writers distinguished between them.

Thus Guillim, who wrote on heraldry, in 1610, says: "The Unicorn hath his name of his one horn on his forehead. There is another beast of huge strength and fearfulness, which hath but one horn, but that is growing on his snout, whence he is called rhinoceros, and both are named Monoceros, in Conclusion, it hath been much questioned among naturalists which it is that is properly called the unicorn; and some hath made doubt whether there be any such beast as this, or no."

Whatever uncertainty there might be among the ancients on that point, there was none among them as to the medicinal value of the horn, be it that of unicorn, unicorn, monoceros or rhinoceros; for the standard works on zoology and medicine from the time of Pliny onward all testify to the potency of the unicorn's horn.

If we marvel at the credulity of the learned men of the Middle Ages, we have only to remember some of the beliefs of the present generation, says Mr. Lucas. Who adds:—

"It is not many years since the blue glass craze swept over the land; yesterday we were seeking immortality by drinking sour milk; to-day it is the light-hearted yeast cake that is to lengthen our days; to-morrow it will be something just as good.' And if it seems strange that no one considered it as remarkable that a patient who was wealthy enough to procure a dose of unicorn powder should die, the explanation is simple; either the precious horn was given too late when the patient was in extremis, or the dose was too small."

That it was not used more commonly was because of its rarity and price. For unicorn horn was not a poor man's medicine; it was reserved for princes and potentates. The quotations on horns varied from £2,000 upward; extra fine horns were valued at as much as £30,000, or, considering the purchasing power of money then, nearly £100,000.

There seems to have been a belief that the medicinal value of a drug or whatever else was employed in medicine bore some relation to its scarcity and its costliness. Thus we are told that Gregory XIV was kept alive for several days by having gold and jewels administered to him; but in the end even these failed to preserve the life of the unicorn failed to preserve the life of the pontiff.

That particular horn, which is now of historic interest, and all the more valuable because it lacks the very tip administered to Pope Gregory when in extremis, has just been presented to the American Museum by Mr. John Marshall. We learn from the inscription round the cover of the case in which it is preserved that the prior and the brothers of the monastery of St. Mary of Guadalupe presented it to Pope Gregory XIV, in 1590.

It is scarcely possible that they gave it because they knew that he was in poor health. Be that as it may, the incumbency of Pope Gregory XIV. was brief, for it lasted only a year, and the precious horn proved unavailing.

When Funerals Were Taxed.

Few enactments placed on the statute book evoke more criticism than the Chancellor's annual budget, and possibly no man has a more difficult task in his endeavor to please everybody than the man who levies fresh demands upon our financial resources.

In 1695 a tax of four shillings was imposed on the burial of every person in Britain, and the money had to be paid every year for five years. By another act a further tax was imposed. It varied in amount according to the position in life of the deceased. If you wished to inter a duke it was necessary to pay fifty pounds. Thirty pounds was demanded for the burial of his eldest son, and twenty-five pounds for the younger male members of his family.

In the case of a "gentleman" or his wife, twenty shillings was demanded. Archbishops and their wives were charged fifty pounds, whilst a doctor of divinity, law, or medicine would be buried for five pounds.

These amounts were in addition to the four shillings which was considered sufficient for a commoner, and were payable before any other debts.

Different Pen to Suit His Mood.

Would-be Author: "The typewriter is too prosaic an instrument for me. My instrument must be attuned to my mood. When I feel fierce and aggressive I write with a steel pen; when I describe beauty, riches, and power I write with a gold one."

His Girl Friend: "I suppose, then, you use the quill of a goose for your personal letters?"

Population of Poland.

The population of Poland, exclusive of the army and prisoners of war, is shown to be 28,940,000. In this figure the population of that part of Upper Silesia which has been allotted to Poland is not included, so that the total population of the new Polish Republic will eventually be well over 30,000,000.

SHIFTERS MADE MONEY

STRANGE GET - CASH - QUICK SCHEME AMONG FLAPPERS.

Peculiar Method by Which Many Young Women in the Cities of the United States Got a Few Extra Dollars, to Spend on Their Clothes and on Picture Shows.

Who called them flappers for the first time we do not know, but the word seemed so apt that once it was coined it needed little explanation. It may have had something to do originally with the flapping overshoes, which the true flapper always left unbuttoned. The first reference to this fad that appeared in a book, so far as we are aware, was in Miss Edna Ferber's "Girls," one of whom was the typical flapper. Having been appropriately named, and having adopted by common consent a badge that instantly distinguished them, the young girls enjoyed for a time their prominence in the public eye. They felt that they had achieved something very much like what Mrs. Pankhurst and her associates had gained for the older women. But it was not long before the wearing of unbuttoned goloshes failed to excite and stimulate the girls. Another sensation was necessary, and it was left for some bright girl in New York to discover it. She founded the order of the Shifters.

For some little time past New York has been discussing the Shifters. The society had a membership of tens of thousands before it ever found its way into the newspapers, and when references to it began to appear the general reader was at first under the impression that a sort of ladies' auxiliary to the Ku Klux Klan had appeared. Investigation proved that this was a mistake, and the apprehensions of the authorities were allayed to some extent, but investigation also showed that the organization was one that should not be encouraged, and at present the educational authorities in the City of New York and the managers of the department stores are trying to put an end to it among the High School girls and the salesgirls. By this time, we understand, the veritable flapper has lost interest in the Shifters. The idea has ceased to give her a thrill. It is, to use one of her favorite words, the "junk." She has passed on.

We have referred to the Shifters as an organization or society. It is true that some manufacturer, with belated enterprise, has gone to the expense of drawing up a list of rules and issuing what purports to be the authorized emblem of the supposed society, but the Shifter is no more a society than are the boys who play marbles or the girls who roll down their stockings. It is a mere feminine variation of what used to be a favorite sport with boys, namely, "passing it on." A boy would slap another on the back, or maybe knock off his hat and say "pass it on.'" The other boy would then slap the back or knock off the hat of the boy nearest to him, with the same injunction. The words "pass it on" were supposed to rob the assault of all offence and boys submitted to it. Something like it was the game "Follow the Leader," in which every move the leading boy made had to be imitated by those who followed him, such as ringing doorbells, jostling pedestrians and other more or less innocent pranks.

But the flapper's idea was not sport; it was business. She wanted to make money for her various sweaters, her sports shoes or her fashionable blanket cloth skirt. So she supplied herself with half a dozen brass clips, such as are used in business offices, had the mystic letters "OW" stamped or scratched on them, fastened the ends of her scarf together with one of them and was all ready for business. The first girl who noted the clip would ask what it was for. The other girl would explain that it was the official emblem of the Shifters, to which every smart flapper should belong. The way to belong was to hand the first girl a quarter and receive in return one of the brass clips. The payment of this fee and the display of the emblem entitled the second girl to receive members. She could charge for the initiation ceremonies all she could get, but as a rule this was a quarter.

The idea spread like wildfire. In a few weeks tens of thousands of girls were wearing the brass tags, and most of them, it would appear, had made money. Some girls made as much as $12 a week in selling for a quarter brass tags worth, perhaps, twenty-five cents a hundred. In fact, it was one of those beautiful schemes like that of Get-Rich-Quick Miller that made money for everybody as long as it lasted. In reality it was not more sound economically than the idea of people getting rich by taking in each other's washing. The last comers were the victims. The fad spread to Wall Street, where it was taken up by young men who were amused with the notion of selling a brass clip for, perhaps, $10, and for a while office boys and heads of firms invested in clips. They very stung, but they passed on the sting, just like a few years ago they used to make bonfires with the option of making other bonfires. Into the days said, by this time the real flappers had tired of the game and [illegible] keen for something [illegible] with a kick in it.

A Tragedy of the Bush.

The body of Ben. Cockrane, a trapper, was found torn to shreds north of Fisher river, on Lake Winnipeg, during the first week of April, having been attacked by a pack of timber wolves. His bones and pieces of his clothing and a rifle with a broken stock were also found near by. Before succumbing to the pack, Cockrane shot seven wolves dead and clubbed four to death, their bodies lying around his tattered remains being the only evidence of his fight for life.

PAINS IN BACK AND SIDES

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ontario.—"I used to have very bad pains in my back and sides and often was not fit to do my work. I tried many medicines before I began to take yours. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the Toronto Globe and know that it has helped me I recommend it to all of my neighbors. I keep it in the house all the time and take it once in a while so mother how well I feel, for one dose of prevention is worth a pound of cure."—ELIZABETH CAMPBELL, 13 St. Paul St., Lindsay, Ontario.

To do any kind of work—and you know there is much to be done—is next to impossible if you are suffering from some form of female trouble. It may cause your back to ache or a pain in your side; it may make you nervous and irritable. You may be able to keep up and around, but you do not feel good.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for women. It is especially adapted to relieve the cause of these troubles, and restore them to normal health.

Willie: "Oh, rather! It is toothless."

OUR PORCUPINE.

It Differs Entirely From the European Hedgehog.

The name Hedgehog and Porcupine, have been so often interchanged and mis-applied that many people do not know that they really do belong to two very distinct and separate types of animals. In fact the only feature which the two have in common is their prickly spines and even these are very different.

The hedgehog is a European animal and is not found in Canada at all, while the porcupine is a North American creature and is not found in England. The hedgehog is only about the size of a large rat, while the porcupine averages about 28 inches in length and is many times larger in every way. The hedgehog is an insectivora or insect-eating animal with sharp, conical teeth, while the porcupine belongs to the rodentia or gnawers like the squirrels and beavers and has chisel-shaped teeth.

The hedgehog is covered with stiff, prickly spines which are not detachable. When touched, he rolls himself up into a compact ball by means of powerful muscles immediately under the skin. This is his only means of defence.

The porcupine has barbed quills which come out very easily when touched. On being disturbed, he does not curl up but merely erects his spines. He cannot shoot or throw his spines as is sometimes erroneously supposed, but in defending himself he will often lash out rapidly with his tail and as the loose quills readily stick wherever they strike, this was what probably gave rise to the idea that he shoots them.

The hedgehog prefers to be abroad in moist, wet weather, which makes England a peculiarly happy home for him. In dry, hot weather he prefers the damp coolness of his burrow. The young hedgehogs are very precocious and are quite able to take care of themselves from birth except in the matter of protection. Their spines are undeveloped at first, being only small colorless hairs which soon, however, become hard and prickly. He is a perfectly harmless little creature and is beneficial in that he lives on all manner of insects. His flesh is edible and indeed is said to be considered quite a delicacy.

The porcupine, too, is edible and is valued on account of the fact that he is the only animal of the forest which a man without firearms can kill for food. Consequently it is an unwritten law of the north woods that no person shall kill a porcupine unless in need. Many a man lost in the cold heart of the woods has owed the strength and hope which carried him finally back to life and civilization to a lucky meeting with one of these stupid blundering beasts. For the porcupine is both stupid and blundering and it is a real proof of the efficacy of his spiny armor that he is not now extinct. It is said that very few animals can kill him. The bear being one of the few who can do so on occasion. This bruin manages by keeping carefully out of the range of the prickly, active tail and deftly rolling him over so as to get at his unprotected throat and stomach. However, even a very clever bear and one well inured to such discomforts of the hunt as bee stings is not likely to pass through any dealings with Mr. Porcupine without suffering agonies from at least a few of the barbed shafts buried in his tender nose.

A young dog or any unsophisticated young creature of the woods is certain to receive such a dose on his first encounter with the strange shuffling animal that he is not likely to ever meddle with him again. The quills of the porcupine are covered with tiny barbs which make their extraction almost more painful than the only alternative of leaving them in until they gradually force their tortuous way through the soft flesh and out at the other side.

The porcupine is short-sighted and short-legged and very slow and awkward in his movement. His food is entirely vegetable matter, principally the bark and green leaves of trees. He is perfectly harmless and inoffensive and all he asks is to be allowed to continue his quiet, shuffling existence in peace.

The porcupine and the hedgehog are both such remarkable, strange creatures in their own way and differ so distinctly from each other that it seems more than just odd that their names should be so often interchanged.

Prairie Dogs.

Prairie dogs seem to have some kind of foreknowledge of the weather. If observers at the New York Zoological Park are right, when the large members of the colony loosen the earth round their mounds with their forefeet, then shovel the soil upward with their hind feet. Other members work inside the burrow, throwing out earth to aid in the building. When a duke has been built, the animals stamp the earth down with their heads—an amusing sight. As these operations invariably take place before a storm, the obvious purpose is to build a dam that will keep the water from running into the burrow.

Both Correct.

Two Irishmen were arguing who was the clever. "Well," said Pat, "I'll bet you can't tell me what keeps bricks together." "Sure," said Mike, "it's mortar." "Wrong," said Pat, "that's what keeps them apart."

U. S. Auto Accidents.

Last year there were no fewer than 2,000 persons killed and 40,000 injured by automobiles in New York State alone.

Hopkins on the subject, "Food Problems of To-day." Miss Hopkins is a graduate of Macdonald Institute, Guelph, and has spent two years in hospital dietitian work. Township Councils.
It will doubtless be of interest to such Councils to learn that Mr. Samuel Miller, Reeve Amherst Island, has, through the kind efforts of Mr. W. D. Black, M.A., succeeded in getting The Ontario Highways Act amended so that a Township road overseer or foreman can speedily acquire gravel for road purposes from the owners thereof in same manner as County Road Superintendent for County Road purposes. Mr. Miller is to be congratulated on his success and it would be well for every Township in the County to procure a copy of the Act at one and act upon it, thus avoiding the delays that often arise in getting gravel.

Thrown from Wagon and Dislocates Wrist.
To be thrown from a hay wagon and suffer painful injuries while on their way to Kingston Friday morning was the misfortune of two men by the name of Shaver and Delderfield, who reside near Ernestown station, on Friday morning. The two men were just a short distance out of Odessa when the rear wheel of the wagon came off, and they were thrown from the top of the hay to the ground, striking the fence along the road and then falling in the ditch. Mr. Shaver suffered a severe compound dislocation of his right wrist, injury to his left, as well as cuts about his right eye. He was taken to the Kingston general hospital. Mr. Delderfield, who suffered injuries about his shoulder, was attended in Odessa.

Tamworth 21, Adolphustown 8.
Another of those heavy-hitting County League games was staged at Adolphustown on Wednesday afternoon, when the Tamworth Tammany Tigers invaded the former village and walked away with a 2 to 8 victory. The home team lost out by errors in the field, and through a general blow-up in one bad innings. The visitors hit hard and often, and had the game on the ice after the fifth innings. The home town team fought hard all through and never had the breaks of the game. The victory for Tamworth sends their team up to second place in the Lennox group, while the Adolphustown will have to be satisfied with once removed from the cellar. H. Pine, of Picton, handled the game most satisfactorily. There was a good crowd of fans and fanettes out for the match, and the home team was cheered lustily in spite of the defeat. The batteries were James and VanAlstyne, Tamworth; H. Smith, Cruise and Allison, Adolphustown.

IMMORTAL BIRDS.

"Clay Pigeons" Are Used In Sport and Never Die.

You must often have read paragraphs in the papers about clay-pigeon shooting; but do you know what a clay-pigeon is?

It is more like a large saucer than anything else, and it is the hollow side of the "saucer" which adds a sporting flavor to the clay-pigeon's flight, by making it swerve to right or left instead of following a straight course.

The clay pigeon is flung into the air from a trap—a metal arm connected with a powerful spring. The spring is released by a trigger to which is fastened a long wire.

At one end of the shooting ground is a raised bank, and eighteen yards behind this bank is the firing line. In front of the bank and under its shelter there is a trench, and on the ground before the trench a row of traps. In the trench sit the trappers—the men who replenish and reset the traps after the pigeons have been flung out.

The actual firing of the traps is performed by a man known as a puller. He sits in a little dug-out behind the guns, and before him are a number of levers rather like those in a railway signal-box. To each lever is attached a wire, which passes under ground and is fastened to the trigger of a trap. Therefore, whenever the puller depresses a lever he release one of the clay pigeons.

Each competitor fires from a different position at every shot, while an additional sporting touch is provided by the fact that no man can tell beforehand which of the traps is going to be released.

For the crack shot a still more difficult test can be provided. This is called the "double rise," and consists in releasing two clay birds at the same time. The sportsman's object in the "double rise" is, of course, to hit a bird with each barrel. This is called a "right and left." When you remember that the two birds are probably sailing in almost opposite directions, the difficulty of this feat is more easily imagined.

The Clay-Bird Shooting Association is the parent body of this sport, and anyone with ordinary humane instincts will readily admit its advantages over the live-pigeon shooting contests, in which tame birds are mercilessly slaughtered or wounded.

NAPANEE CHAUTAUQUA DATES

JULY 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8

HONOURABLE PHILIP WHITWELL WILSON

Former Member British Parliament, Diplomat, Author, Orator, American Correspondent London Daily News.

The valuable work of Mr. Wilson has been brought to the attention of the world through his articles that are constantly featured in the English and American magazines, journals, and newspapers. He is regarded as a benefactor to the British people since he sets forth clearly in these articles the British views of many world problems and makes clear to the rest of the world the facts in many of Britain's serious and pressing problems. These articles have dealt with Ireland, India, Egypt, the Mohammedan peoples, the Near East, and some of Britain's internal problems as well. These articles have appeared of late in the New York Times, the New York World, the New York Tribune, the World's Work, the Review of Reviews, the North American Review, the Outlook, Current Opinion, the Weekly Review, and other journals.

We count it a distinctive gain to be able to have so distinguished and gifted a man from England visit our community and give us some interesting information concerning the state of affairs in Europe and present for our thought and attention some of the problems that confront the British Empire, in which Canada has an especial interest.

We copy the following biographical data from the "British Who's Who":

"Mr. Philip Whitwell Wilson was born at Kendal, England, in 1875. On his father's side he has long lines of Quaker forbears. His mother was Miss Bagster, of the family which published the Bagster Bibles. At the University of Cambridge Mr. Wilson was a Scholar of Clare College, an Honor-man in Mathematics, the Editor of "The Granta" (the Undergraduates Magazine founded by Sir Owen Seaman and Rudolph Lehmann of Punch) and President of the Union Society, which is the club and debating forum for the University. He joined the staff of the London Daily News, of which newspaper he was successively Assistant Editor, Parliamentary Correspondent and Special Correspondent in the United States. At the age of thirty he entered the House of Commons as Member of Parliament for a London Constituency. He has written several books on religious subjects, particularly The Christ We Forget, The Church We Forget and The Vision We Forget; these have a wide distribution, and Mr. Wilson has been elected an Honorary Life Member of The American Bible Society. Theodore Roosevelt, before he died, sent for Mr. Wilson to visit him in his hospital, where the ex-President thanked him for his services in promoting good relations between the old world and the new."

MR. GABRIEL HINES.

Composer, Pianist, Lecturer, in a Unique Program

One of the most unique and profitable programmes scheduled for Chautauqua this summer will be the lecture-piano-recital by Mr. Adabriel Hines, American composer and pianist. He will speak on "Music: the Democratic Art," illustrating and demonstrating his points with a program on the piano.

At the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, Mr. Hines was awarded the second prize of $1,500.00 for the second best American captata. There were 482 contestants. Mr. Hines' cantata, "The Pilgrim's Voyage," depicted the westward course of national development from the landing of the Pilgrims in 1620 to the time of the San Francisco Exposition, and was produced during the Exposition under Mr. Hines' personal direction.

Mr. Hines is a thorough student of music. He is versed in the music of the masters as well as the folk-songs of all lands. He is a remarkable pianist and an excellent lecturer. Following his lecture-recital, he will hold a round-table conference. Here parents may get authorative answers to questions that perplex them in regard to the musical education of their children. That Canadian music students can secure just as good a musical education here in their own country as in Europe, is one of his firm beliefs.

DEATH TOLL IN STORM

Fifty People Drowned From Small Boats.

Hurricane Struck New York Without Warning and Caught People at the Beaches Trying to Escape the Heat—Ferris Wheel Blown Over and Six Passengers Lost Their Lives In the Crash.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Wind of hurricane velocity, the outrider of a torrential rainstorm that swept from the eastern edge of New Jersey across this city and over Westchester county late Sunday afternoon, was responsible for at least fifty deaths, hundreds of minor accidents, large destruction of property, and riots and panicot traffic terminals and pleasure resorts.

The most numerous fatalities were drownings off City Island of men and women in rowboats. Eight bodies had been recovered at 10 o'clock Sunday night, and 30 persons were not accounted for.

The dead calm of the late afternoon, following a day of scorching heat, had driven thousands to the relief anywhere it promised to be cool. The number of those in rowboats off the Westchester shore, at City Island and Throgsneck, was estimated at 15,000. The gale came out of an almost clear sky, and reaching shore before it struck was hopeless for most of those in the boats.

A tree was blown over on the brick chimney of Red Lion Inn, on the Boston Post road, and the chimney fell through the roof of the main restaurant, killing two persons.

Drivers of motor cars were caught under falling trees, one man dying in such an accident near Hackensack.

Broken glass, blown from big windows in this city, injured several persons.

With the hurricane twisting and turning its freaks at a velocity of between 72 and 88 miles an hour, chimneys were ripped down, bungalows were overturned, hundreds of trees were uprooted in thoroughfares and parks, planks were snatched from the tops of unfinished buildings and carried along like feathers, scores of electric signs were torn down, automobiles were wrecked, and thoroughfares were showered with fragments from broken plate-glass windows.

At the northern end of Manhattan Island the twister must have reached a velocity of more than 100 miles an hour in its spurts. The official velocity, taken at the Weather Bureau on the southern tip of Manhattan Island, not in the path of the worst of the storm, ranged as high as 88 miles an hour, but the officials there admitted out that the velocity in the Bronx undoubtedly was a great deal higher. There was no official measurements of the speed where speed was watched.

Lightning popped its destruction in a score of places throughout the city, cutting off electric power, shattering poles, ripping off cornices, starting fires, and creating an interminable roll of thunder, which did much to add to the danger among the thousands of persons rushing for shelter.

Six people are known to have died and 50 were injured when lightning hit a Ferris wheel at Rockaway Point, on the Bronx shore of Long Island Sound.

So suddenly did the electrical storm break that the crew operating the big wheel, in which 60 people were riding, were unable to stop the machine and allow the passengers to alight. With a roaring crash, the wheel, with its load of shrieking men, women and children, toppled to the ground, part of it burying itself in the water of a bathing beach nearby.

Crawling through the wreckage, while a deluge of rain fell upon them, rescuers, led by park employes, carried the maimed to a recreation pier 50 feet away, where they were laid out in rows pending the arrival of physicians. Five ambulances quickly responded and in them, as well as in commandeered automobiles, the injured were rushed to hospitals.

Deputy Police Chief Dominick Henry and District Attorney Edward Glenn of Bronx county were soon on the scene with 200 police reserves and took charge.

Several doctors and many others ministered to the injured, as fast as the injured were attended to they were rushed to hospitals by the ambulances, which worked in relays.

Kato Premier of Japan.

TOKIO, June 12.—Admiral Baron Kato has accepted the Premiership. His non-party Cabinet comes into power with the avowed intention of carrying out the agreements of the Washington Conference in spirit and to the letter.

The one condition on which Kato accepted the Premiership was agreement of army leaders to reduce the estimated army budget by forty million yen and to adopt a general policy of retrenchment. Kato will have the support of the Zeyakai majority party in the Diet and the Kenyu-kai, the largest group of peers in the House of Lords. It is understood that Shidehara has the refusal of the Foreign Office portfolio in Kato's Cabinet.

MAY TRY AERIAL MAIL.

Airplane Service to the Yukon Is Under Discussion.

OTTAWA, June 12.—The Postmaster-General has under consideration a proposal to establish an aerial service to the Yukon, but he does not hold out much hope of its being put into effect immediately.

He made this statement in the House of Commons Saturday night in reply to a plea for a better winter mail service. The question was raised by Dr. Black, who represents that district. Hon. Charles Murphy promised also to take Dr. Black's request into consideration. The House was considering a vote of $28,833,000 for the Port Office Department.

At the outset of the discussion Hon. H. H. Stevens urged the Postmaster-General to investigate the handling of the mails with a view to giving the National Railways a preference. Mr. Murphy said that an inspector of the department was going to make a tour of the country during the coming summer with the object of seeing what improvements could be made. The Canadian national would be given a preference wherever possible, with due regard for economy.

R. B. Hanson (Conservative, York-Sunbury) wanted to know if the Government had resumed the practice of opening new free rural mail routes which had been suspended during the war. The Postmaster-General said that the matter was under consideration at the present time, but he had not been advised as yet to open any new routes.

FAILED TO SAVE BROTHER.

Deaf Mute Tried to Rescue Boy From River at Sarnia.

SARNIA, June 12.—While dipping minnows in a pond known as the "Rafts" Saturday afternoon, Reuben Burgess, aged 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Burgess, Charles street, Point Edward, was drowned while his mute brother and three playmates failed in a desperate attempt to save the life of their companion as he struggled and sank beneath the waters.

The young victim was dipping minnows prior to starting on a fishing trip with his playmates, and had walked out on to a plank, which suddenly snapped off and plunged the Burgess lad headlong into the pond, and before his playmates could secure help the lad was drowned.

The deaf and dumb brother, standing by, procured a rope and finally attempted to rescue his brother, but Reuben was unable to grasp the rope.

George McArthur, working at the coal docks, noticed the helpless deaf mute pacing up and down the dock and came to his assistance. With the help of Frank Noel, he pulled a small boat through the pilings of the dock and located the body of the little lad about 12 feet out in the water. Efforts at resuscitation were ineffectual. A pulmotor was telephoned for to Sarnia, which arrived in record time with Doctors Bell and McMillen, Fire Chief Battry and Firemen Eddinth and Wray. Another effort was made to revive the spark of life, but in vain.

BALFOUR STILL BUSY.

Acts as Foreign Secretary During Lord Curzon's Illness.

LONDON, June 12.—The Earl of Balfour, handy man of the British Cabinet, is once more in the saddle, for he is now taking on the duties of British Foreign Secretary, owing to the protracted illness of the Marquis of Curzon. After his return from the Washington Conference—he was then plain Arthur Balfour—this veteran statesman took away from London before Premier Lloyd George could find another big job for him, and spent many weeks on the Riviera playing tennis. On several occasions he partnered Mlle. Lenglen against the King of Sweden in mixed doubles. But finally there was the League of Nations Council meeting, and the Earl of Birkenhead had to rush off to Geneva as British representative. He had hardly got back to London before Lloyd George put on his trail to ask him to take over the Foreign Secretaryship, and there Earl Balfour is likely to remain for some time, because Earl Curzon is making only a slow recovery after his very acute illness. It is even suggested that he is to become the Government's spokesman in the House of Lords when Earl Curzon does return to his post at the Foreign Office, because Curzon may not be able to stand the heavy work entailed in holding down both jobs. For all his years the Earl of Balfour is as active as he was a quarter of a century ago.

MAY RETAIN SPEAKER

Talk of Making Position Good for Lifetime.

Premier Drury Has Been Considering the Advisability of Following the British Custom, and the Name of the Hon. Nelson Parliament Is Associated With the Possible Innovation.

TORONTO, June 12.—Ontario may break away from all Canadian precedents by appointing a permanent Speaker to the Legislative Assembly. The subject was more or less mooted at the close of the 1921 session of the Legislature, and it is understood that the Drury Government is giving more than passing thought to such a move at the next and concluding session of its first term.

Hon. Nelson Parliament, the present incumbent of the office, is, of course, the prospective permanent Speaker. Certainly he has shown the Drury Government no favors in his rulings from the Speaker's chair. His qualifications, in the mind of the Premier and private members, is, on the other hand, his apparent disregard for party politics."

The Premier and the Attorney-General along with Hon. G. H. Ferguson and H. Hartley Dewart, K.C., have gracefully acquiesced in the present Speaker's submissions that certain nasty remarks were better withdrawn.

The "three cheers for the Speaker" with which the Legislature concluded its business session on Friday last was indicative of more Parliamentary politeness to its presiding officer. Hon. Mr. Parliament is held in the highest regard by both Opposition leaders and by all private members on both sides of the House. Corridor gossip on the subject would indicate that there would be no opposition from any party on the ground of a possibility of individuals or parties receiving or suffering from discrimination in the years to come.

While the Government is understood not to have made up its collective mind on the matter, the considerations which the Premier is said to be weighing are the necessity and advisability of retaining a presiding officer of absolute fairness and independence, and—although Hon. Mr. Nelson has been fortunate in the past in her selection of presiding officers for the Legislature—of avoiding possibilities of abuse of the office in future. In making such a move, Ontario would be adopting the methods of the British Parliament, which has always had a permanently appointed presiding officer.

Hon. Nelson Parliament is, or was, a Liberal, and sits for Prince Edward county.

STRANGLED COMPANION.

Terrible Crime Committed In Insane Ward of Poorhouse.

DIGBY, N.S., June 12.—That they strangled Boyd E. Pendleton, aged 25, with a pair of man's braces, one holding his legs while the other did the major part of the deed, is the story Blanchard Tidd told Saturday concerning himself and Harry Smith, both inmates, with Pendleton, of the harmlessly insane ward of the Digby County Poorhouse. Smith held the man's legs, Tidd said.

An inquest was held by Coroner Daley and a jury, and a recommendation was made that Tidd and Smith be removed fo an asylum for the criminally insane.

Pendleton was found dead in his bed Friday morning and death was presumed at first to have been from natural causes, as the man had been ill. Blood on the bedclothes and a mark on Pendleton's neck, however, led to inquiries.

Tidd at first said the dead man hanged himself with Smith's braces, but later told the story of strangulation by himself and his companion.

Swept Over Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., June 12.—A woman, subsequently identified as Mrs. Jones, waded into the Niagara river just above the Falls Saturday afternoon and was swept over the Horseshoe Falls.

The woman left on the bank a note, which read: "I am going to see the Falls. If I get dizzy and fall, please notify William Jones, Orchard Park, N.Y." The note was signed "D. J."

At the Jones home it was said that Mrs. Jones had been missing since early morning. Relatives said that she had been despondent because of ill-health.

WEBSTER MAN'S MAN

CHAPTER I.

When John Stuart Webster, mining engineer and kicker-up-of-dust on distant trails, flagged the S. P. L. A. & S. L. Limited at a blistered board station in Death valley, California, he had definitely resolved to do certain things. To begin, he would invade the dining car at the first call to dinner and order approximately twenty dollars' worth of ham and eggs, which provender is, as all who know will certify, the pinnacle of epicurean delight to an old sour-dough coming out of the wilderness with a healthy bankroll and a healthier appetite.

Following the ham and eggs, Mr. Webster planned to saturate himself from soul to vermiform appendix with nicotine, which he purposed obtaining from tobacco with nicotine in it. It was a week since he had smoked anything with an odor even remotely like tobacco, for the August temperature in Death valley is no respecter of moisture in any man or his tobacco. Upon arrival in Salt Lake City his spree would really begin. Webster designed chartering a taxicab and proceeding forthwith to a hotel where he would engage a sunny room with a bath, fill the bathtub, climb blithely in and soak for two hours at least, for it was nearly eight months since he had had a regular bath and he purposed making the most of his opportunity. His long-drawn ablutions at length over, he would don a silken dressing gown and slippers, order up a barber and proceed to part with enough hair and whiskers to upholster an automobile, and upon the completion of his tonsorial adventures he would encase his person in a suit of mauve-colored silk pajamas, climb into bed and remain there for forty eight hours, merely waking long enough to take another bath, order up periodical consignments of ham and eggs, and incidentally, make certain that a friendly side-winder or chuckwalla hadn't crawled under the blanket with him.

So much for John Stuart Webster's plans. Now for the gentleman himself. No one—not even the Pullman porter, shrewd judge of mankind that he was—could have discerned in the grysalis that flagged the Limited the butterfly of fashion that was to be. As the ebony George raised the vestibule platform, opened the car door and looked out, he had no confidence in the lean, sun-baked big man standing by the train. Plainly the fellow was not a first-class passenger but a wandering prospector, which was plain from the set of rags and hairy as a tarantula. The only cleanabout him was a heavy-calibered automatic pistol of the army type, swinging at his hip.

"Day ouch an' tourist car in front," the knight of the whiskbroom announced in disapproving tones and started to close down the platform.

"So I perceived," John Stuart Webster replied blandly. "I also observed that you failed to employ the third 'sir' when addressing a white man. Put that platform back and hop out here with your little stool, you saddle-colored son of Senegambia, or I'll make you a buzzard porter in ruts."

"Yassuh, yassuh!" the porter sputtered, and obeyed instantly. Mr. Webster handed him a disreputable-looking suitcase and stepped aboard in state, only to be informed that there wasn't a vacant first-class berth on the train.

"Yes, I know I'm dirty," the late arrival announced cheerfully, "but still, as Bobby Burns once remarked, 'a man's a man for a' that'—and I'm not unsanitary."

"I'm very sorry," the conductor replied perfunctorily and endeavored to pass on, but Webster secured a firm grip on his lapel and frustrated the escape.

"You're not sorry," the ragged wanderer declared, "not one little bit. You're only apprehensive. However, you needn't be. There is no wild life on me, brother. I assure you."

"But I tell you, the train is full up. You'll have to roost in the day coach or the tourist. I'm very sorry——"

"Nevertheless, despite your deep grief, something tells me you're spoofing, so while I must, of necessity, accept your suggestion, said acceptance will be but temporary. In about two hours, young fellow, you're going to make the alarming discovery that you have bats in your belfry." And with a whiskery grin which, under the circumstances, was charming in its absolute freedom from malice, Mr. Webster departed for the day coach.

Two hours later the conductor found him in the aforementioned day coach, engaged in a mild game of poker with a mule-skinner, a Chinaman, an aged prospector, and a half-breed Indian, and waited until Mr. Webster, on a bob-tailed flush, bluffed the Chinaman out of a dollar-and-a-half pot.

"Are you Mr. John S. Webster?"

"Your assumption that I am that person is so eminently correct that it would be a waste of time for me to dispute it," Webster replied quizzically. "However, just to prove that you're not the only clairvoyant on this train, I'm going to tell you something about yourself. In your pocket you have a telegram; it is from Chicago, where your pay-check originates; it is short, sweet and comprehensive, containing an order which you are going to obey. It reads somewhat as follows:

"'My friend, John S. Webster, wires me from Blank that he boarded train at Blank and was refused first-class accommodation because he looked like a hobo. Give him the best you have in stock, if you have to throw somebody off the train to accommodate him.' Signed, 'Sweeney.'

"Do I hit the target?"

The conductor nodded. "You win, Mr. Webster," he admitted.

"Occasionally I lose, old timer. Well?"

"No offense, Mr. Webster, no offense. I can let you have a stateroom——"

"That's trading talk. I'll take it."

The conductor gave him his receipt and led him back to the stateroom in the observation car. At the door Webster handed him a five-dollar bill. "For you, son," he said gently, "just to take the sting out of what I'm about to tell you. Now that I possess your receipt and know that ten men and a boy cannot take it away from me, I'm going to tell you who Sweeney is."

"Who is he?" the conductor queried. Already he suspected he had been outgeneraled.

"Sweeney," said Mr. Webster, "is the chief clerk in one of Chicago's most pretentious hotels and a young man who can find all the angles of a situation without working it out in logarithms. I wired him the details of my predicament; he heard the Macedonian cry and kicked in. Next, is it not?"

The conductor grinned, "I hate to take your money," he declared.

"Don't. Just at present I'm very flush. Yes, sir, I'm as prosperous as a yearling burro up to his ears in alfalfa and the only use I have ever found for money is to make other people happy with it, thereby getting some enjoyment out of it myself. When I'm broke I'll make some more."

And Mr. Webster retired to his hardwon sanctuary, where he removed as much alkali and perspiration as he could, carded his long hair and whiskers, manicured his finger nails with a jack-knife, changed his shirt, provided five minutes of industry for George with his whiskbroom and brush, and set himself patiently to await the first call to dinner.

Presently a pink-jowled, well curried, flashily dressed big man, of about Webster's age, passed in the corridor, going toward the head of the train. An instant later a woman's voice said very distinctly:

"I do not know you, sir; I do not wish to know you, and it is loathsome of you to insist in addressing me. If you do not stop your annoying attentions, I shall call the conductor."

"Ah! Beauty in distress," John Stuart Webster soliloquized. "I look so much like an avenging goat I might as well butt in." He stepped to the door of his stateroom. A girl stood in the vestibule, confronting the man who had just passed Webster's door. Webster bowed.

"Madame, or mademoiselle, as the case may be," he said, "unlike this other male biped, my sole purpose in presuming to address you is to suggest that there is not the slightest necessity for taking this matter up with the conductor. I am here and very much at your service."

The girl turned—and John Stuart Webster's heart flopped twice in rapid succession, like a trout newly grassed. She was as lovely as a royal dish. Her starry glance began at his miner's boots, traveled up his old soiled, whipcord trousers, over his light blue chambray shirt and found the man behind the whiskers. She favored him with a quick, curious scrutiny and a grave, sweet smile. "Thank you so much, sir," she answered, and passed down the corridor to the observation car.

"Well, old-timer," Webster greeted the fellow who had been annoying her, "how about you? What do you think we ought to do about this little affair?"

"The sensible thing would be to do nothing. You might start something you couldn't finish."

"That's a dare," Webster declared brightly, "and wasn't it the immortal Huckleberry Finn who remarked that anybody that'd take a dare would suck eggs and steal sheep?" And he was already a few seconds, appraising his man. "I suppose you commenced operations by moving into her section and asking if she would like to have the window open and enjoy the fresh air. She repuffed you, but being a persistent devil, you followed her into the observation car, and in all probability you ogled her at luncheon and ruined her appetite. And just now, when you met her in this vestibule, you doubtless jostled her, begged her pardon and without waiting to be introduced asked her to have dinner with you this evening."

"Well?" the fellow echoed belligerently.

"It's all bad form. You shouldn't try to make a mash on a lady, I don't know who she is, of course, but she's not common and for the sake of the mother that bore me I always respect and protect a good woman and whale h—— out of those that do not."

He reached inside his stateroom and pressed the bell. The porter arrived on the run.

"George," said Mr. Webster, "in a few minutes we're due at Smithville. If my memory serves me aright, we stop five minutes for water and orders."

"Yassah."

"Remain right here and let me off as soon as the train comes to a stop."

When the train slid to a grinding halt and the porter opened the car door, Webster pointed. "Out!" he said. "This is no nice place to pull off a scrap."

"See here, neighbor, I don't want to have any trouble with you——"

"I know it. All the same, you're going to have it—or come with me to that young lady and beg her pardon."

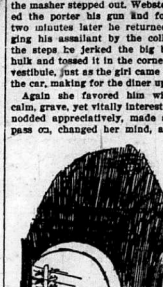
"All right. I'll apologize," and he started forward as if to pass Webster in the vestibule, on his way to the observation car, whither the subject of his annoying attention had gone. Two steps brought him within striking distance of his enemy, and before Webster could dodge, a sizzling right-handed blow landed on his jaw and set him back on his haunches in the vestibule.

It was almost a knockout—almost, but not quite. As Webster's body struck the floor the big automatic came out of the holster; swinging in a weak circle, it covered the other.

"Trat was a daisy," Webster mumbled. "If you move before my head clears, I'll put three bullets into you before you reach the corridor."

He waited about a minute, then with the gun he pointed to the car door and the masher stepped out. Webster handed the porter his gun and followed; two minutes later he returned, dragging his assailant by the collar. Up the steps he jerked the big battered hulk and tossed it in the corner of the vestibule, just as the girl came through the car, making for the diner up ahead.

Again she favored him with that calm, grave, yet vitally interested gaze, nodded appreciatively, made as if to pass on, changed her mind, and said



"You Are a Very Courtly Gentleman."

very gravely: "You are—a very courtly gentleman, sir."

He bowed. There was nothing else to do, nothing that he could say under the circumstances. To use his chivalry as a wedge to open an acquaintance never occurred to him—but his whiskers did occur to him. Hastily he backed into his stateroom and closed the door, presently he rose and surveyed himself critically in the small mirror over the washstand.

"No, Johnny," he murmured, "we can't go into the diner now. We've too blamed disreputable. We were bad enough before that big swine hung the shanty on our right eye, but whatever our physical and personal feelings, far be it from us to parade our iridescent orb in public. Besides, one look at that queen is enough to do us for the remainder of our natural life, and a second look, minus a proper introduction, would only drive us into a suicide's grave." He slipped a ring for the porter and told him to send a waiter for his order, since he would fain break his fast in the privacy of his stateroom. And when the waiter came for the order, such was Mr. Webster's mental perturbation that ham and eggs were further from his thoughts. He ordered a steak with French fried potatoes.

John Stuart Webster passed a restless night. Sleep came to him in hourly installments, from which he would rouse to ask himself whether it was worth while to continue to go through the motions of living, or alight at the next station, seek a lonely and unfrequented spot and there surrender to outrageous fortune. It was altogether damnable, in a careless moment, Fate had accorded him a glimpse of the only woman he had ever met and desired to meet again—for Webster was essentially a man's man, and his profession and environment had militated against his opportunities for meeting extraordinary women; and extraordinary women were the only kind that could hope to challenge his serious attention. Fate had accorded him a signal opportunity that might conceivably result in the service of this extraordinary woman, and in the absence of a formal introduction, what man could desire a finer opportunity for getting acquainted! If only their meeting had but been delayed two weeks, ten days, a week! Once free of his ugly cocoon of rags and whiskers, the butterfly Webster would not have hesitated one brief instant to inform himself of that young lady's address, following his summary disposal of her tormentor.

But in all things there is a limit, and John Stuart Webster's right eye constituted a deadline beyond which, as a gentleman, he dared not venture; so with a heavy heart he bowed to the inevitable. Brilliant and mysterious as a meteorite she had flashed once across his horizon and was gone.

In the privacy of his stateroom Webster had ham and eggs for breakfast. He was lighting his second cigar when the porter knocked and entered with an envelope.

"Lady in the observation-car asked me to deliver this to you, sah," he announced importantly.

It was a note, freshly written on the train stationery. Webster read:

"The distressed lady desires to thank the gentleman in stateroom A for his chivalry of yesterday. She is profoundly sorry that in her service the gentleman in stateroom A was so unfortunate as to acquire a red eye with blue trimmings."

John Stuart Webster swore his mightiest oath. "By the twelve apostles, Simon Peter, Andrew, James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Matthew, Thomas, James, Jude and Simon, and not omitting Judas Iscariot, the scaly scoundrel who betrayed his Lord and Master!" He searched through an old wallet until he discovered a fairly clean professional card, across the bottom of which he wrote, "Thank you, J. S. W." and sent it to the no-longer-distressed lady.

The most signal adventure of my life is now over," he soliloquized and turned to his cigar. "For the sake of my self-respect, I had to let her know I'm not a hobo! And now to the task of framing up a scheme for future acquaintance. I must learn her name and destination; so as a preliminary I'll interview the train conductor."

He did and under the ameliorating influence of a five-dollar bill the conductor lent a respectful ear to the Websterian message.

"In Car Seven" he began, "there is a young lady. I do not know what section she occupies neither do I know her name and destination. I only know what she looks like."

The conductor nodded. "And you want to ascertain her name and destination?"

"I do."

"All right. I'll make an unused portion of her transportation to return to her before we hit Salt Lake; her name is on the ticket and the ticket indicates her destination. I'll make a mental note of both as soon as I've identified the party."

A few hours later the conductor came to Webster's stateroom and handed him a card upon which was written:

"Dolores Ruey. From Los Angeles, via San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake, to Salt Lake City. Denver & Rio Grande to Denver, Burlington to St. Louis, Illinois Central to New Orleans. Stop-over at Denver."

John Stuart Webster studied the name after the conductor withdrew. "That's a Spanish name," he soliloquized, "but for all that, she's not a parakeet. All things considered, I guess I'll take a chance and investigate.

CHAPTER II.

Webster's dreams of bliss had, with very slight variations, come true as per schedule. In Salt Lake City he abandoned the beefsteak on his damaged eye for two businesslike leeches, which quickly reduced the nocturne effect around his orb, enabling him, the third day, to saunter forth among the fair fellows and the end of the week he was a being rehearnated, and so he packed a huge new wardrobe-trunk with his latest purchases and journeyed on to Denver. Coincident with his arrival there, we again take up the thread of our story.

One hour after his trunk arrived the gentleman from Death Valley might have been observed standing before a cheval glass looking long and earnestly at the reflection of his middle-aged person, the while he marked the fit of his new raiment. John Stuart Webster was all dressed up for the first time in three long, labor-ridden years, and was tremendously glad of it. He had a cigar and stepped forth into Seventeenth street, along which he strolled until he came to a certain building into the elevator of which he entered and was whisked to the twelfth floor, where he alighted and found himself before a wide portal which bore in gold letters the words: "Engineers' Club."

The Engineers' club was the closest approach to a home that John Stuart Webster had known for twenty years, and save for the slight job of kalsomining which Father Time had done on the edges of the close-cropped Websterian mustache, the returned prodigal might have stepped out of the club but yesterday. He would not have taken the short end of a modest bet that even a fresh log had been placed on the fire or that the domino-players over against the wall had worn or lost a drink or two and then resumed playing—although perchance there were a few more gray hairs in the thickly thatched head of old Neddy Jerome, sitting in his favorite seat by the window and turning the cards in his eternal game of solitaire, in blissful ignorance that John Stuart Webster stood within the portals of home and awaited the fatted calf.

Webster struck the upholstery of an adjacent chair a terrific blow with his stick—the effect of which was to cause everybody in the room to start and to conceal Mr. Webster momentarily in a cloud of dust, the while in a bellowing baritone he sang:

"His father was a hard-rock miner;
He comes from my home town——"

"Jack Webster! The devil's own kin!" shouted Neddy Jerome. He swept the cards into a heap and waddled across the room to meet this latest assailant of the peace and dignity of the Engineers' club. "You old, worthless, ornery, no-good son of a lizard! I've never been so glad to see a man that didn't owe me money. I've been combing the whole civilized world for you, for a month, at least. Where the devil have you been?"

John Stuart Webster beamed happily upon his friend. "Well, Neddy, you old stocking-knitter," he replied quizzically, "since that is the case, I'm not surprised at your failure to find me. You've known me long enough to have remembered to confine your search to the uncivilized reaches."

"Well, you're here, at any rate and I'm happy. Now you settle down."

"Eh? Neddy, Neddy, I'm young yet, you know—only forty. Still a real live man and not quite ready to degenerate into a card-playing, eat-drink-and-be-merry, die-of-inanition, sink-to-oblivion and go——fireplace spirit!" And he prodded Jerome in the short ribs with a tentative thumb that caused the old man to wince. He permitted his friend to drag him downstairs to the deserted lounge, where Jerome paused in the middle of the room and renewed his query:

"Where have you been, I ask?"

"Out in Death valley, California, trying to pry loose a fortune."

"Did you pry it?"

John Stuart Webster arched his eyebrows in mock reproach. "And you can see my new suit, Neddy, my sixteen-dollar, made-to-order shoes and my honey boots—and in silken hose—and ask that question? Freshly shaved and ironed and almost afraid to sit down and get wrinkles in my trousers! Smell that!" He blew a cloud of cigar smoke into Jerome's smiling face. The latter sniffed. "It smells expensive," he replied.

"Yes, and you can bet it tastes expensive, too," Webster answered, handing his cigar-case to his friend.

Jerome bit the end of his cigar and spat derisively. "How much have you made?" he demanded bluntly.

"It's none of your business, but I'll tell you because I love you, Neddy. I've made one hundred thousand dollars."

"Chicken-feed," Jerome snorted. "Johnny, I've been combing the mineral belt of North and South America for you for a month."

"Why this sudden belated interest in me?"

"I have a fine job for you, John—" "King's X," Webster interrupted, and showed both hands with the fingers crossed. "No plotting against my peace and comfort, Neddy. Haven't I told you I'm all dressed up for the first time in three years, that I have money in my pocket and more in bank? Man, I'm going to tread the primrose path for a year before I get back into the harness again."

Jerome waved a deprecatory hand, figuratively brushing aside such feeble and inconsequential argument. "Are you foot-loose?" he demanded.

"I'm not. I'm bound in golden chains——"

"Married, eh? Great Scott, I might have guessed it. So you're on your honeymoon, eh?"

"No such luck, you vichy-drinking cenoclast. If you had ever gotten far enough from the Engineers' club for fifteen years to get a breath of real fresh air, you'd understand why I want to enjoy civilization for a week or two before I go back to a mine superintendent's job on some bleak hill. Who, sir, is Old Jeremiah Q. Work and I have had a falling out. Find him your picture, Neddy. I want some class! I've been listening to a dago ditt-boss playing the accordion for the past three years, and I'm getting three tunes. Now I want Sousa's band. I've been bathing in tepid, dirty water in a redwood sluice-box, and now I desire a steam room and a needle shower-bath. I've been living in a boarding-house and Italians and was forced to learn their language to get results, and now I want to speak my mother tongue to my old friends. By thunder I'm going to have a new deal all around."

"Very well, Jack. Don't excite yourself. I'll give you exactly thirty days to sicken of it all—and then I shall come and claim my property."

"Neddy, I'll not work for you. I'm mad, I tell you——"

"You're it. I just tagged you."

"I require a rest—but unfold your proposition, Neddy. I was born a poor, weak vessel consumed with a curiosity that was very nauseating. I can only protest that this is no way to treat a friend."

"Nonsense! My own brother wants this job, and I have refused to give it to him. Business is business—and I've saved it for you."

Jerome leaned forward and laid his finger confidentially on Webster's knee; whereat the light-hearted man derer carefully lifted the finger brushed an imaginary speck of dirt from it and set it down again. "Be serious, you ingrate," Jerome protested. "Listen! I've been working for two years on a consolidation up near Telluride, and I've just put it across. Jack, it's the biggest thing in the country. Colorado Consolidated Mines Company, Limited. English capital, Jack. Pay 'em 6 per cent and they'll call you blessed. There's twenty-five thousand a year in it, and a house and a good cook and an automobile and a chauffeur, and you can come to town whenever you please, provided you don't neglect the company's interests—and I know you're not that kind of an engineer."

"Do I have to put some money into it, Neddy?"

"Not necessarily, although I should advise it. I can let you in on the ground floor for that hundred thousand of yours, guarantee you a handsome profit and in all probability a big cleanup."

"I feel myself slipping, Neddy. Nevertheless, the tall goes with the hide. I'm not in the habit of asking my friends to guarantee my investments, and if you say it's right, I'll spread what I have left of the hundred thousand when I report for duty."

"It's been a tremendous job getting this consolidation over, Jack. When——"

"In pity's name! Spare me. I've heard all I want to hear about your confounded consolidation. News! News! Give me news! I have to beg for a drink— Mose, you black sinner, how dare you appear before me without bringing a drink?"

Mose, the aged colored porter of the Engineers' club, flashed a row of ivories and respectfully returned the democratic greeting.

"Letter for you, suh. The secretary told me to give it to you. Mistah Webster."

"Thank you, Mose. Speak up, Neddy, and tell me something. Ever hear anything of Billy Geary?"

He was nearing the edge of the envelope the while he gazed at Jerome, who was rubbing his fat hands together after the fashion of elderly men who are well pleased with themselves.

"You have a chance to become one of the greatest and richest mining engineers in the world, Jack," he answered, "now that you've cut loose from that young crook Geary. I don't know what's become of him, and neither does anybody else. For that matter, nobody cares."

"I do—and you can take the brief end of that bet for your last white chip. Don't let me hear you or anybody else say anything against Billy Geary. That boy goes for no money, every turn in the box. Don't make any mistakes about that, oldtimer."

Webster's face suddenly was serious; the bantering intonation in his voice was gone, and a new, slightly strident note had crept into it. But Jerome waved his hand soothingly.

"All right, old Johnny Pepper-box, have it your own way. Nevertheless, I'm a little mystified. The last I knew of you two, you had testified against him in the high-grader trials at Cripple Creek, and he had pulled out under a cloud, even after his acquittal."

"Give a dog a bad name, and it will stick to him," Webster observed. "Of course I testified against him. As engineer for the Mine Owners' association, I had to. The high-grade ore was found in his assay office, and the circumstantial evidence was complete, and I admit Billy was acquitted merely because I and others could not swear positively that the ore came from any certain mine. It was the same old story, Neddy. You can be morally certain that high-grade ore has been stolen from your mine, but unless you catch the ore thief in the act, how can you prove it? I suppose you read the newspaper reports and believed them, just as everybody else did."

"Well, forget it, Jack. It's all over long ago, and forgotten."

"It wasn't all over so long ago as you seem to think. I suppose you knew the Holman gang was afterward sent to the penitentiary for those same high-grade operations? Billy Geary's acquittal didn't end my interest in the case—not by a jugful!

SO MANY PEOPLE ARE NERVOUS

"Fruit-a-tives" the Greatest of all Nerve Remedies

This Fruit Medicine Restores Health

The increase in the number of persons suffering from Nervousness is world-wide; due, in a measure, to the reaction following the war. Sleeplessness, Headaches, Mental Depression, Rheumatism, Nervous Dyspepsia, Bad Heart Action, are the results of a disturbed condition of the Nervous System.

The nerves and the blood are so intimately, so vitally, connected that the condition of one is bound to affect the condition of the other. If the blood is laden with impurities, it is impossible to have strong, steady nerves.

The first essential in treating nervous troubles is to purify and enrich the blood. This, "FRUIT-A-TIVES" will do.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" stimulates the bowels, kidneys and skin and purifies the blood, "Fruit-a-tives" improves appetite and digestion and insures food being properly digested, thus enabling the blood to carry wholesome nourishment to build up the body, particularly the nerves.

Men and women who take "Fruit-a-tives" for some form of nervousness—because they cannot eat or sleep or work or enjoy life—say that this fruit medicine is simply marvellous in its action.

Beautiful Minaki

The wealth of that vast stretch of country in Northern Ontario, reaching over 750 miles from the boundary of the Province of Quebec on the east, to Manitoba on the west, and north from the Great Lakes to the pathless regions of James Bay, is not confined to its minerals, its timber or its clay lands.

This country has matchless stretches, well wooded and watered by chains of charming lakes and rivers, where game fish are abundant and where the deer, the moose, and black bear freely roam. Civilization is gradually pushing the frontier back, and in the process creating new summer resorts farther and farther from the active centres of commerce, where the tourist breaks his journey for a few days on his "Across Canada" tour, and the holiday seeker spends his vacation. Thus the country capitalizes its scenery and sells it to the tourist.

Minaki, which derives its name from the Indian (Mee-Naw-Kee), meaning "Beautiful Country," is one of the beauty spots in this region. Minaki Station, on the Transcontinental line of the Canadian National Railways, is situated 114 miles east of Winnipeg, on the Winnipeg River, one of the great rivers of the North that drains the Lake of the Woods chain of waterways into Lake Winnipeg.

Minaki Inn, a modern summer hotel, is located in a beautiful park overlooking Sand Bay, and during the past few years many summer homes and clubs have been built in the vicinity, making a large summer colony.

Minaki is historic ground, as it was by way of Winnipeg River that Wolseley made his way to Western Canada, half a century ago, to quell the first Riel rising.

DESTROYING MUSTARD

How to Get Rid of a Very Unwelcome Weed.

Iron Sulphate Will Give Satisfaction —Clean Cultivation Will Eradicate Bladder Campion or Cow Bell — Fitting the Horse Collar an Art.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Following is a continuation of last week's discussion on the best methods of destroying certain weeds affecting Ontario farms:

Spraying With Iron Sulphate to Prevent Mustard From Seeding In Cereal Crops.

Iron sulphate or copperas can be successfully used to destroy mustard in standing grain without injury to the crop.

Preparation of Solution.

A 20 per cent. solution should be applied. This can be prepared by dissolving 80 pounds of iron sulphate in forty gallons of water. The sulphate is dissolved quite readily in cold water. The solution should be strained through a sieve or cloth as it is put into the spray pump tank. This will remove dirt and small particles that are apt to clog the nozzles.

Time to Apply.

Apply on a calm clear day just as soon as the first few plants in the fields show flowers. It is very important to spray early. If the plants are left too long the treatment is not nearly so effective. If a heavy rain comes within twenty-four hours after the solution is applied, it will be necessary to spray again.

How to Apply the Solution.

An ordinary hand pump barrel sprayer, such as is employed to spray fruit trees may be used, or a potato sprayer can be rigged up to do this work. Many of the horse-drawn sprayers have a special broadcast attachment for spraying weeds. These are excellent for large areas, as they cover a wide strip at each round. Care must be taken to see that every Mustard plant is covered with the solution in the form of a fine spray.

The results of the ten years' co-operative experiments show that Mustard may be prevented from seeding in oats, wheat or barley by spraying with a twenty per cent. solution of iron sulphate without any serious injury to the standing crop or to the fresh seedings of clover.—J. E. Howitt, O. A. College, Guelph.

Method of Cultivation For the Eradication of Bladder Campion or Cow Bell.

Badly infested fields should be ploughed deeply in the fall and then cultivated and cross-cultivated with a broad-shared cultivator in order to break up and weaken the under root-stocks. In the spring this cultivation should be repeated frequently enough to prevent the plant making any growth above ground until it is time to put in a hoed crop, which must be kept thoroughly clean in order to be effective. A well-cared-for corn crop planted in hills so that it can be cultivated both ways has been found to give excellent results. Special attention must be given to hoeing out any bladder campion plants which may appear in the corn crop and which are not destroyed by cultivation. One fall and one spring's thorough cultivation, followed by a well cared for hoed crop, has been found to destroy practically all the bladder campion in a field, except in exceptionally wet seasons.—J. E. Howitt.

Fitting the Horse Collar Is An Art

Much trouble results on the average farm each year from sore shoulders on horses caused by the improper fitting of collars, and improper adjustment of hames.

The collar should fit the shoulder so that in length there is just room for the flat of one's hand between the collar and the neck at the bottom. In width the collar should fit snugly against the sides of the neck from a point three inches above the shoulder point, to a point about half way up to the top of the neck. The upper one-third to one-half of the collar should be wide enough to allow one to pass the thick of the hand between the collar and the side of the neck. If the upper part of the neck is thick a "Quarter Sweaney" or "Half Sweaney" collar should be used, so as not to pinch the neck. A collar too wide at the top will produce a sore neck on account of side motion of the collar as the horse walks.

Sweat pads should be avoided as they hold the heat and sweat and produce a tender shoulder, often causing a galled condition.

The hames should be adjusted so as to hold the collar snugly against the sides of the neck, and so as to bring the line of draft right angles to the face of the shoulder as nearly as possible.

The collar should be kept clean by washing with a damp cloth each night when it is removed from the shoulder.

Washing the shoulder each evening with cold salt water will help to toughen the skin and prevent shoulder galls.

Notes.

Signs of improving demand are apparent at horse auctions at city centres. Renewed activity in the building trades and the fact that farmers feel like sowing bigger acreages now that labor costs are coming down are features favorable to the horse breeding industry.

Canada's crop of corn is over fifteen million bushels of grain of which Ontario produces close to seven-eighths, and six million tons of forage stored in between fifty and sixty thousand silos.

Build Ice Shed.

Ice may be stored in the corner of a woodshed or outbuilding, but it is better to have a building, especially built for the purpose, because the dampness is apt to rot sills and walls.

Stick to Horses.

Breeders of good work horses were told to hold their animals in anticipation of better conditions in the near future, at the recent meetings of the breed associations in Toronto. That this demand is not so far off as many persons imagine is indicated by reports from the West, the great outlet for surplus Ontario stock. Commenting on the probability of the horse's comeback the Saskatoon Star offers the following opinion:

"Despite the recent sensational drop in the price of farm implements Dobbin' is expected to prove more popular on Saskatchewan farms this year than for many years past, and its price has slumped along with other things.

"Tractors involve a considerable outlay of money, and money is listed among the things farmers have not too much of, though no monopoly is claimed for them in that regard. Anyway farmers are expressing the opinion that horses will be used more in 1922 than any other year in the past five.

"It is generally understood among farmers that they must get rid of from two to four horses before they are justified in buying a tractor. The popularity of the tractor always depends to a large extent upon the relative cost of the horses and the tractor and horse feed and tractor fuel and repairs.

"Cost of operating a tractor is also a factor in favor of the horse. It is pointed out that not every farmer can acquire skill in operating a tractor, and in such cases he has to hire help. They state that almost any laborer that comes along can drive a team of horses, but there are very few of them who can drive a tractor.

"The sum total of this is that farmers this year feel that they cannot afford to pay skilled mechanics $4 to $1.25 an hour to run a tractor when they can hire men for $1.50 to $2 a day to drive a team of horses."

War Gases for Pests.

Deadly gases that were developed for war purposes are now being tried out as a means for destroying noxious animals and insects. Some of them promise to be useful when applied under proper conditions, particularly those that are heavier than air and can be used on burrowing rodents, and possibly subterranean insects and pests in stored product.

Tests on gophers have shown that the chlorine can be used for destroying these pests of the wheat fields, also phosgene has been used with promising results in fighting the rat plague.

Entomologists have been working for some time in testing various gases for controlling insect pests of growing plants and those that infest stored grain, but it has not yet been found advisable to recommend anything to take the place of hydrocyanic gas or carbon bisulphide.

The serious disadvantage of many of the new gases is that they are dangerous or very irritating to men and horses, and require the use of masks and great care in handling.

ABOUT SOILING CROPS

An Easy Way to Supplement Dry Midsummer Pastures.

Alfalfa and Clover, Peas, Oats and Corn Cut Green Make Succulent, Nourishing Food — Weed Seeds Spread by Manure — When to Plant In a Late Garden.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

When the pastures dry up in June, July, August or September, the shrinkage is noted in the milk can and on the ribs of all the live stock. No grass, no milk, no beef, or at least not enough to be really profitable, is a condition both undesirable and too frequent in the experience of many farmers.

Live stock to be profitable must be fed liberally. Maintenance rations —dry pastures are nothing more—never make beef or milk, and never can be profitable.

Feeding Soiling Crops Prevents Losses.

The farmer who provides green or succulent feed to carry his live stock at full capacity during any period of pasture shortage is not only making his operations profitable, but he is preventing losses that liberal feeding alone can prevent.

The farmer who takes time by the forelock and provides a summer silo does not fear a short drought, knowing full well that his stock feed reserve is standing ready. The man without the summer silo must do the next best thing, provide ample green crops that are palatable and succulent to do what the pastures fail to do. A few pounds of green peas and oats, green clover, green alfalfa or green corn in addition to the dry pasture pickings make for contentment, a full milk pail and thrifty young stock.

How to Carry Over Ten Cows.

If a farmer has ten cows he should figure on the crop from one half acre providing ample green feed to carry them ten days. Peas and oats mixed one and a half bushels of each, and sown as early as possible in the spring, and followed by a second seeding ten days later, will provide for twenty days of an early drought.

An area of alfalfa near the feed-yard is especially useful during July and August to keep the stock going until the early corn is ready. Sweet clover is more useful as a pasture plant than as a crop plant that may be cut and taken to the feed rack.

Clovers, peas, oats and corn will furnish all the succulent feeds that are necessary providing of course that the stockman undertakes their production in due time each spring. Grow a few additional acres each year to feed this spring, and if drought occurs you will be fortified against loss.—L. Stevenson, Secretary, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Weed Seed Spread by Manure.

It is quite well known that weed seeds pass through the digestive tracts of animals and still remain viable. The manure will contain these seeds, and the result is that a field may become infested with weed plants, some of a very noxious character. In spite of this fact, precautions are not generally observed in the feeding of screenings which contain seeds of noxious weeds.

As a result of experiments at the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station, it was found that in feeding certain seeds to cows the germination may even be increased after having passed through the digestive tract. Curled dock, a very common farm weed, germinated only four per cent. in its natural condition. A quantity of this seed was fed to a cow, and 100 such seeds were placed in a germinator. Ninety-eight out of the one hundred grew. The same is true to some extent of lambs' quarters, often known as pigweed. The seed of this weed germinated 62 per cent. before feeding, 88 per cent. after feeding. The germination of quack grass seemingly was not much affected, as a germination of 85 per cent. was secured before feeding, and 80 per cent. after feeding. The viability of Canada thistle seed was decreased to some extent, but enough seed remained to infest a field.

In view of the foregoing figures, the farmer should be very careful in the use of screenings. They should either be ground to the very finest possible condition, so as to crush all weed seeds, or else they should be fed to such animals as sheep, which grind up and thoroughly destroy the ordinary weed seeds.

What to Plant In Late Garden.

Carrots, beets and celery for winter use may be planted in the latter part of June.

Golden bantam corn to keep up the supply for late summer.

Early string beans and peas to provide substitutes for meat.

Fresh and crisp vegetables as the means of saving canned products for winter use.

Seed sown in mid summer should be planted in freshly stirred soil and somewhat deeper than in spring, and the soil over the seed should be "firmed" more carefully than usual.

The Home Vegetable Garden.

The home vegetable garden should be a family interest and all members of the family who are able to do so should take part in its cultivation. There is no better form of outdoor exercise than moderate working in the home garden, and few lines of recreational work will give greater returns for the time employed.

DOUBLE ANGLE WAY.

Saves Men and Horses In Preparing Seedbed.

In preparing a seed bed for cereals, spring work should start just as soon as the land is ready. Average yields from different dates of seeding show that once the land is fit every day's delay means loss of yield.

Autumn ploughing has invariably produced, says Superintendent J. A. Clarke, better results with cereals at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Charlottetown, than spring ploughing. Land that is ploughed early in the autumn and not worked is improved by ridging up late in the fall. This autumn ridging allows the land to drain off and dry out a few days earlier in the spring.

There are many different ways of knowing when land is ready to be worked; one of the best is to take a handful of soil, squeeze it in your hand and if it crumbles when the hand is opened, the field may be harrowed.

The condition and character of the soil will determine which cultural implement should be used first. It is good practice on late ploughed, sandy loam, sod land that is free from crouch grass, to start cultivation with a double angle scrape of the double disc-harrow. This saves almost one half the turning and cuts the sod at two different angles, pulverizing the land without backsetting the sods in the furrows.

The double angle way of harrowing a field is so useful that the following illustration may assist in preparing better seed beds for cereals this season. It saves time, harness, horses and the teamster's temper. Let A. B. C. and D. represent the four corners of the rectangular field, A. being the northwest; B. southwest; C. the northeast and D. the southeast corners. Starting at A. the harrow is driven straight to D. It is then turned right about and driven back to A., allowing a disc or so to lap on the newly harrowed ground, when the harrow comes to the fence A. D. near the corner A., a quarter turn is made and it is driven across the harrowed strip to the fence A. C., near the corner A., at an agle parallel to a line drawn from the corner B. to the corner C., a quarter turn is again made from the corner B. to the corner C., a quarter turn is again made and the harrow driven along the side of the first land harrowed until it comes to the fence C. D., near the corner D. A quarter turn is made and the harrow crosses the two widths of harrowed ground to the fence B. D., traveling parallel to the line drawn from B. to C. A quarter turn is made every time the harrow reaches a fence. Every time the harrow crosses the harrowed ground it is on the inside or nearer the center of the field until eventually the long way of the field is from B. to C. and the field is finished by driving direct from one of these corners to the other. A few turns around the outside of the field finishes up the head ridges for both angle scrapes.

Thorough cultivation is essential in preparing a seed bed for cereals. When the land has been ridged for winter the spring-tooth harrow driven lengthwise of the drills will flatten them so that the other harrows may be used crosswise or angleread, and by the time good tilth has been secured the ridging will have disappeared.

When the land is lumpy or very loose the roller will pack it so that the next scrape of the harrows does much more work. When the right tilth is obtained the land is rolled before seeding with the drill and the field is finished with the smoothing harrow.

Lime Controls Club Root.

Club root of cabbage may be controlled by heavy applications of lime on the infected soil. From 10 to 80 bushels of lime per acre are required to completely destroy the disease. Club root also attacks cauliflower, particularly when grown on soil infected with the club root of cabbage. The lime applied to control the disease is also effective in sweetening the soil thus resulting in a greater crop increase.

WINDBREAK PROTECTS BEES.

Strengthens Colonies and Make Sure of Queens In Spring.

The main object of spring manipulation is to produce as large a force of bees as possible for the harvest. To secure this force it is essential that the colonies be strong, that the queen be young and prolific, and that she has sufficient room for maximum egg production; also that the bees have an abundance of available stores properly placed within the hive. It is the work of the beekeeper to provide these conditions during the spring.

Bees that have wintered in a cellar should not be placed outside until the first nectar secreting flowers are opened. Colonies showing signs of restlessness and dysentery can often be saved by bringing them out earlier and placing them in packing cases.

To reduce drifting the bees should be brought out during the evening or on a dull day, when there is little chance of flight. The entrances should also be reduced to about one inch; this will help to conserve heat and help to prevent robbing.

Where the spring is likely to be cold and backward, the bees should be given some protection when first placed outside. A windbreak should also be provided to protect them from the prevailing winds.

On the first warm day, when the bees are flying freely, every colony should be examined for stores and queens. Colonies having less than ten or fifteen pounds of stores can be helped, from those having a surplus, or be given a thick sugar syrup, or, better still, combs of honey saved from last year's crop. All weak and queenless colonies or colonies having failing queens, should be united. Unite the weak to colonies of medium strength or weak queenright colonies to strong queenless colonies. If the hives are badly spotted with dysentery and contain many dead bees, they can be cleaned out somewhat, but it is advisable to make this first examination brief unless the weather is exceptionally warm.

Be sure there are plenty of stores in the hives at all times and that the queen has sufficient room for brood rearing; add empty combs as rapidly as the colonies become strong enough to require them. Water is essential for brood rearing in the spring. If no water is near the apiary, a watering place should be provided in some sheltered place where it is easily accessible to the bees.

Do not attempt to equalize brood until colonies are in such a condition to take care of it. Spreading brood should be avoided as it may result in chilled brood which does more harm to the colony than if it were left alone.

Bees wintered outside should not be removed from the cases until they are working well in the first super. The extra protection during the early spring encourages maximum brood production.

As the spring advances the brood chamber should be enlarged to provide sufficient room for brood rearing and stores. This can be done either by raising brood from the lower chamber into a super or by giving a second chamber without a queen excluder.—C. B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist.

Dairy Notes.

Milk cans should be washed as soon as emptied.

Thoroughly clean all utensils which come in contact with milk.

Calves ought to get acquainted with the feel of the comb and brush very early.

Feed all the roughage a cow will eat. She will eat more if fed two or three times a day.

There is no other disease known that causes the same number of deaths in dairy cattle as tuberculosis.

There is no specific cure for tuberculosis whether in humans, animals, birds. The keynote is prevention.

What Men Admire Most in Women is Perfect Health —the Sign of Strength

Barrie, Ont.—"I was suffering from a rundown system some time ago, was unfit to perform my daily duties, and was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I tried it, took two bottles, and was restored to my natural strength. I cannot praise Dr. Pierce's medicine too highly and will be willing to write to any one sending a stamped envelope."—Mrs. A. H. Bishop, R. R. No. 1.

Mothers, Advice for You!

London, Ont.—"I wish I could tell all the women in the world who suffer with woman's trouble, what a wonderful medicine Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is. My earliest experience with it was during my first expectancy. I became dropsical and my people were quite alarmed about my condition. The doctor's medicine did not seem to reach my trouble at all so my husband urged me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and to please him I did. Before I had finished the second bottle the distress and dropsy left me and I felt in absolutely perfect health. I had no further trouble from that time on. I afterwards took Favorite Prescription whenever in a nervous rundown condition and it always strengthened and built me up."—Mrs. Lily Stoddart, 438 Ontario St.

Thirsty Yukoners Stock Up.

VICTORIA, June 12.—The Yukon is making an effort to forestall the dry spell threatened by the United States regulation prohibiting passage in bond of liquors through American territory, by stocking up before the order becomes effective June 15. "It is not wise to change horses while crossing a stream. It is advisable to return once more to a show of confidence in those whom you returned unanimously on the last occasion."

This reference to the elections of next week is taken as final assurance that a complete accord has been reached between the real leaders of the Republican and the Free States factions.

BUT HOW ABOUT THE NEXT WORLD ?

As the World Wags :

At the Arlington Hotel in Richmond, Ind., this sign is on all the stationery and in every room :

"This hotel is fully equipped with automatic sprinklers. Statistics show that loss of life has never occurred in a sprinklered building. In case of fire you may get wet but not burned."

To me that's a wonderfully consoling thought. Before I go to sleep I always recite this little prayer inspired by the sign :

Now I lay me down to sleep,
Statistics guard my slumber deep ;
If I should die I'm not concerned,
I may get wet but I won't get burned."

Sizing up the situation generally we realized that the difference between the present price and the sale price must be very marked. With this in mind we have made reductions so generous that on sale day and the days following you can secure values that have not been possible in years.

These Rugs are in Wilton, Axminster, Brussel and Tapestry. They come in various wantable colors and usable sizes. They were chosen by our carpet buyer, who has had years of experience, from the best Canadian, English and Scotch manufacturers.

If you want a Rug, or will want a Rug in the near future, this is your golden opportunity to buy.

More complete particulars will be given in our advertisement in this week's edition of the Napanee Beaver.
